

Andrew Dines

Prior to qualifying as a solicitor with Simmons and Simmons, Andrew was an officer in the regular army. He practised as a solicitor for 18 years, the majority of which was as a partner in Hampshire firms.

Since 2000, Andrew has worked in consultancy and training roles with both professional and non-professional firms, focusing on the development of strategic governance, leadership and risk skills and processes. One of his key roles was as Director of Training to the Law South consortium of law firms, and he has also achieved a commendation level pass in his Masters degree in Legal Practice (MBA) at Nottingham Law School.

Andrew facilitates training for fresh in personal effectiveness, firm and team leadership and management skills and in financial and commercial awareness.
